LECTURE WEDNESDAY TO LAUNCH
SERIES AT UNIVERSITY OF MONTANA

MISSOULA--

The first in a series of free public lectures to be conducted at the University of Montana under the theme "A Sense of Place and The Sacred" will be Wednesday night (Nov. 28).

Speaker Wednesday will be J. Barre Toelken, a University of Oregon professor of English, who will discuss "Sense of Place and The Sacred in American Indian Literature" at 8 p.m. in room 131 of the UM Science Complex.

Toelken also will sing and play the guitar at a public reception in his honor following the lecture. The reception will be in rooms 360 C-D-E of the University Center.

The lecture series will be conducted during the 1973-74 academic year under the sponsorship of the UM Department of Religious Studies and the Program Council of the Associated Students of UM.
